

Assignment -2

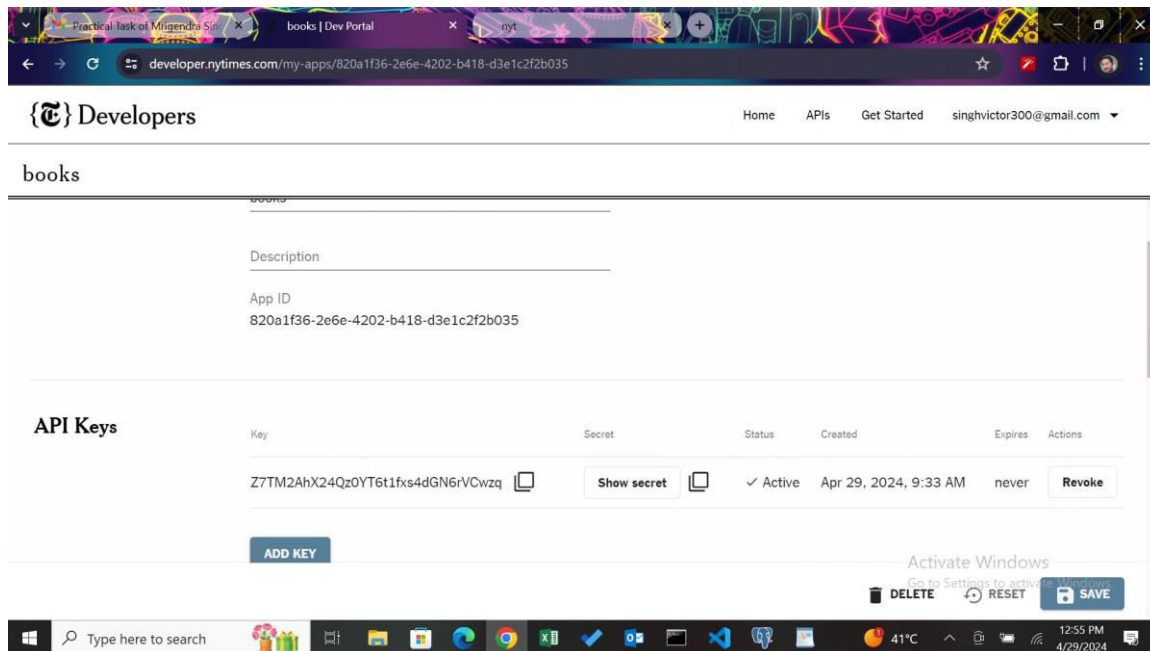

- created a database using postgresql, and created a table as user_utility where defined given column as per the given list.

Table Name: User_utility column: username, password and searches (for storing the json data).

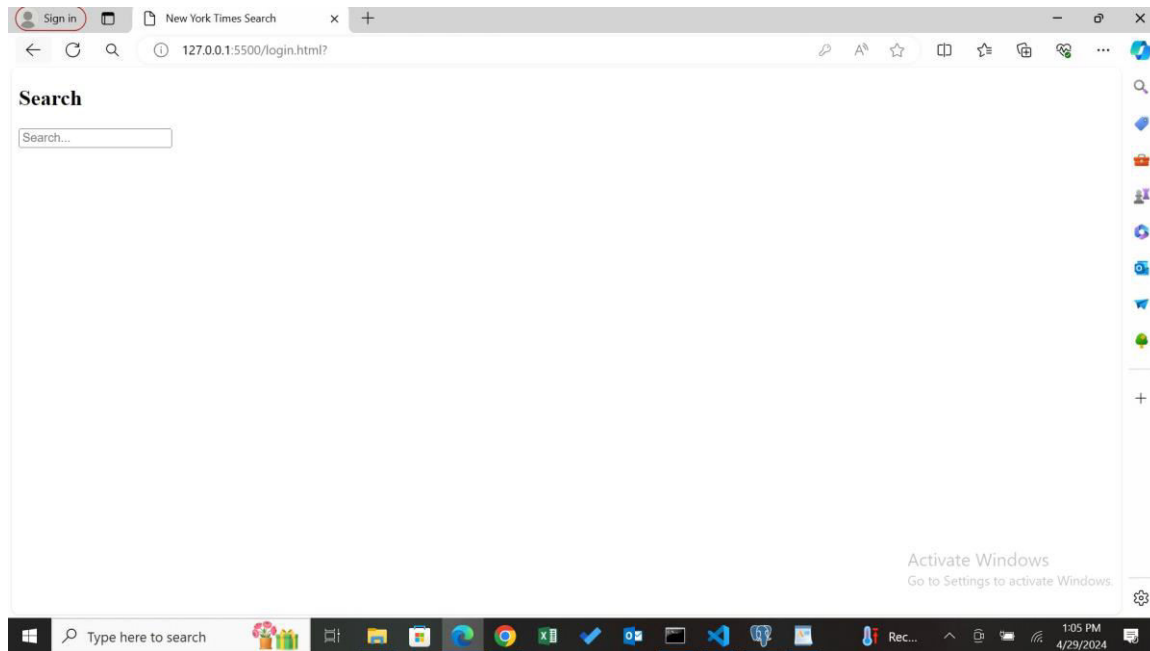

- and singup into new year times developer portal from there got the api keys for article and books.

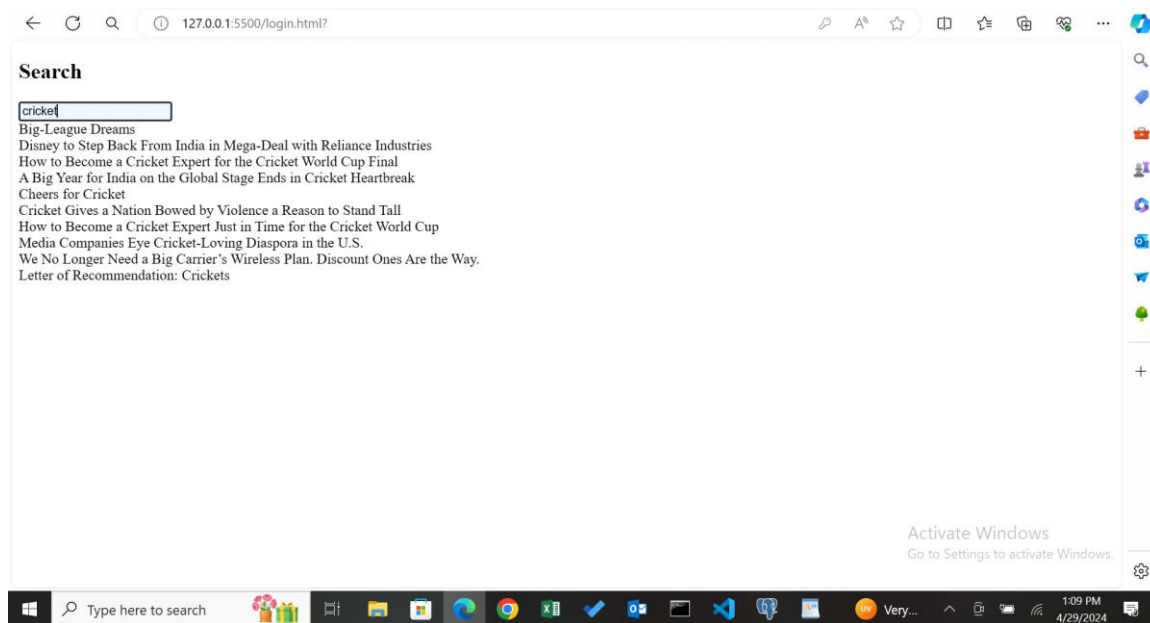

- after that created a two api one for login where at the time of login only username and password will stored into the table.
- and one search get api where based on request it will call the new york times api and got the json required response.
- after that created a user interface where as per given requirements, created a simple login page.

- once user will click on login button at the same time username and password will stored into the database, and it will redirected to the search page.

- after that once user will search it will auto fetch the data from new york times and show the result in list in below.

- once user will click any of the article then it will show as below given image mention as Article Details.

